Bakewell Bridge throws its substantial arch between bank and bank of the Wye river, close to one of the pleasantest towns in Derbyshire, quiet Bakewell, beloved of anglers, which lies in the embrace of softly wooded hills and rich meadows, where herds of cattle eat and ruminate. In close proximity is the town of Lichfield, and a few minutes' walk is Chatsworth House, the residence of the Duke of Devonshire.

Bakewell Bridge. Bakewell Bridge throws its substantial arches between bank and bank of the Wye river, close to one of the pleasantest towns in Derbyshire, quiet Bakewell, beloved of anglers, which lies in the embrace of softly-wooded hills and rich meadowlands, where herds of fine cattle eat and ruminate. In close proximity is Hardton Hall, and a few miles distant is Chatsworth House, the residence of the Duke of Devonshire.
